Methodology

Sample
The survey was delivered to a random sample of 86,699 members. The survey had 2,291 useable responses. The response rate was 2.64 percent.

For 92 percent of respondents, the majority of their business is residential. For six percent of respondents, the majority of their business is commercial.

Eighty-eight percent of respondents are in a state that has declared a state of emergency. Eighty-one percent of members work in a local market where there are presumed or confirmed cases of COVID-19.

Dates
The survey was deployed on Sunday, April 12th, and was closed on Monday April 13th.

The margin of error for overall results is +/-2.05 percent. This response rate is high enough and the margin of error is low enough that the results can be considered quantitative and reflective of all members within this margin of error.
Of those who work with residential tenants, 46 percent of property managers cited having no issues with their tenants paying the rent, compared to 59 percent of individual landlords. Forty-one percent of property managers reported being able to accommodate their tenants who cannot pay rent and 16 percent cited it being difficult. In contrast 24 percent of individual landlords reported being able to accommodate their tenants who cannot pay rent and 12 percent cited it being difficult. Small portions (less than ten percent) of property managers and individual landlords reported tenants terminating their leases.

Twenty-five percent of members cited being able to complete nearly all aspects of transactions while respecting social distance. With minor modifications such as using masks and gloves, 35 percent cited felt person-to-person interactions were still required. Thirteen percent postponed home searching and 20 percent stated that the mandate of stay-at-home prevents them from completing transactions.

- Nearly all aspect of the transaction can be done while respecting social distancing
- Some aspects still require person-to-person interactions, though masks and gloves could lessen the risk of spreading the virus
- Home searching has to be postponed because of the need for close person-to-person interactions and with strangers
- Government mandate of stay-at-home, including not permitting private showings is leading to near impossibility of getting deals done
